"ways to help your kids get more out of the sermon" from notconsumed.com

Change your attitude

My pastor often says, "Repeat after me: The problem is me." It always makes my kids chuckle, but it's such a vital truth in our lives. The first step in any process, goal, or problem is to consider what we can personally do better. This is the case with helping your kids get more out of the sermon. Chances are, you've sent the wrong message about church, fostered negative behaviors, and possibly even been the root cause of a huge attitude issue in your kids.

But don't worry. I'm not throwing you under the bus. We all struggle with this. Being aware of it is more than half the battle. Being willing to grow and change is the other. So, perhaps it's time to change your attitude about church. Do you love God's Word? Do you love listening to the sermon? Do your kids see this? Often our attitudes are marked by frustration, inconvenience, and stress. Don't let that happen to your church experience.

If your kiddos are going to learn to love and enjoy the sermon, it all starts with your attitude about it!
