The Family Corner

"ways to help your kids get more out of the sermon"
from notconsumed.com

Give your kids tools to help them process the information

"This is one of the keys to helping your child truly love church. In fact, you may have started reading this post already knowing how important your attitude is and greatly desiring to hold your kids accountable for what they learn in the sermon, but wondering how on earth to do that. I wish I had an easy answer for you. Every family, child, and church is different. My kids have been carrying a sermon notebook for several years now. The goal of the notebook is to send the clear message that the content of the sermon is worth remembering.

How they remember isn't necessarily going to be the same for each child. I'm not looking for perfect note-taking skills, neat handwriting, or the lack of doodling. In fact, I don't even look at their notebooks. The simple fact of making them and getting them to church each day sends the message I want to convey. You can find sermon note pages that simply help kids listen for key words. You can also find notebooks with detailed questions and in-depth formats. Do a little search on Pinterest and find one that works for you. I actually created one myself. It has two versions. One for younger kids and one for older. I added a few bonus pages like prayer requests and favorite verses, then I made multiple pages and bound them in a notebook. "
